Parquetry Presentation by John Graham

John Graham explained how Parquetry consists of straight-line and geometric patterns with veneers that are 1/28th or 1/40th of an inch thick. When veneers are sliced, the grains may look identical but vary slightly so it's important to mark them with sequence numbers, like pages in a book. Grains can be matched like a “book match” or “slip match”. You should experiment with how the light hits the veneer with different alignments. Often used are Wood Quilting Patterns. For geometric patterns, use precise angles and watch for accumulation of errors. John recommends that it's better to cut veneers with a hand-held veneer saw than with too flexible scalpel blades. Also, be sure to test your finish color before using material in a project.

Dr. Shayegan presents his Persian Rug Marquetry

Dr. Shayegan, an ophthalmologist from Philadelphia, graciously shared his hobby of making Persian Rug designs in Marquetry. He brought in some incredibly detailed and amazingly accurate Marquetry replicas of Persian Rug designs, each taking him from 1 to 2 years to complete. His tools include a fret saw, forceps, and knives. His fret saw blades are so fine that you can't even see the teeth on them. He gets veneers from Constantine's and from travelling abroad. Other supplies are from jewelry supply stores. He uses a straight (not angled) cut and often cuts both fitting pieces at the same time. To avoid chipping, he suggests supporting the piece you are cutting with cardboard or an old veneer. Sanding the finished piece is the most nerve-racking part for him. His work has been exhibited at the Philadelphia Art Museum. We thank him for taking the time to speak with us about his hobby!
